HOW TO WRITE A TRANSLATOR'S STATEMENT

(Author: Bekircan Tahberer, Certified Translator / Edited: ATIO Secretariat)

Each translator should provide a Translator's Statement, (also called a 'declaration' or 'attestation') for legal document translations to authorize their work.

It is very important that ATIO Members provide a standard statement so that recipient institutions can recognize the professional work our members do. A standard statement should include the followings:

- a) Credentials of translator e.g. certified, candidate for certification.
- b) Certified language combination(s) or language combination for which you are a Candidate for Certification. (e.g. English to Korean etc.)
- c) Member number (also known as certification or certificate number).
- d) That they are a Member in Good Standing.

Although it is recommended that translators are careful about the authenticity of documents which they are asked to translate and use discretion when they come across a suspicious document, they may not be held accountable for consequences of translating such documents because a translator is not a forensic expert and they cannot always detect or determine if a document is illegitimate or is going to be used for illegal purposes. However, a translator can avoid problems by providing as much information about the nature of their work as possible. The following information will help the recipient of your translation understand under what conditions you conducted your translation:

- 1 A list of translated documents and who they belong to (to prevent tempering after submitting your translation to your client).
- 2 Number of pages, including the statement page, in your translation package.
- 3 From what source format you conducted your translations e.g. originals, photocopy, pdf or jpeg scans received in person or by fax, email or regular mail, etc.
- 4 Signing (Certified Translator or Candidates for Certification) and/or applying your seal/stamp on each page.
- 5 Personalizing your translation package by stapling a different color paper cap on the upper left corner of the package.

ATIO member statement only refers to a member's association with the Association. Members who are also a member of different professional organizations such as society of notaries public or immigration consultant society should not mention their other profession in a translation statement.
